Community Housing for the Hearing Impaired (CHHI), or residential services, is a program of Deaf-REACH. The Residential Program provides residential settings that range in levels of supervision from group homes that have 24 hours, everyday supervision to apartments where residents receive minimal support from staff.

The program has three group homes, two with 24 hours of supervision and one semi-independent home. In addition to working on housing goals, the individuals engage in a variety of activities such as getting together with others for a cookout, calling or visiting relatives and friends, celebrating each other's birthday, watching movies, etc.
