The Program for the Education and Enrichment of Relational Skills (PEERS) is a manualized, social skills training intervention for youth with social challenges. It has a strong evidence-base for use with adolescents and young adults with autism spectrum disorder but is also appropriate for adolescents and young adults with ADHD, anxiety, depression, and other socioemotional problems.

This classroom setting teaches students the skills to make and keep friends and find their own friend groups based on common interests. PEERS is a 16-week class that meets approximately an hour and a half weekly.
